Among Indians a name is given for deeds of valor and bravery so one Indian may have several different names. To show friendship or for adoption an Indian may give one of his names to another and it is customary for the one receiving the name to give his most prized possession to show that he knows the significance and honor of the name he receives. This is an Indian custom.

Woman + Buffalo Talk

Went to Buffalo talk. An Ind. to get it. He went out

To bring the stuff. An Ind. chugging too. He Told they would have trouble getting them. He gave a buff. + said, If you will find the buff, you'll find the money.

She was always with some young man. He told her after work. She was young now. He told her. She said, didn't want to tell; she just had thought of getting in.

She never made anyone punish her.

I remember when you toldbuff. to,

He followed him. The man lost his knife. She followed him. She lost her

This man the Buffalo got away mad. Started to shoot. I saw the stuff. Piece of metal on the instant. Miss him. But metal killed him. That off.

Also through a protection vs. lightning. We take up big Thunder.

Jo running away before getting set up on rock. No one around. Many.

4 Bears went up on same stone as word Wolf. Big red. Hard. He couldn’t die. Strong red. Running that.

4 Bears when word Wolf finished got down to fire. Got up on rock. The fire not yet big. End of confused Wolf.

When they pulled out 5 dead bears.

I. D. said lots go together. To some lodge.

4 B. Tell black not black. And they going.

Takes it out kind. Say, here’s 1 B. going.

I take your horses.
Bear's on another war path. Stopped. Others went on. One said: "I'm not here. Watched you in trail. [B.] thinking suppose he should close camp + get horses. Have a get together + help. [B. thinking] I'd get the fellow to go with the right direction."

She popped up & said: "Another gives us one of your horses. [B. thought he was] the chief — all alone, talking to himself. Would be chief — call others."

[B. said: Say nothing. At least we, when they give me something to eat, you just look at me + I'll give you something."

[B. almost starved. Finally the boys looked at him. He said: "Can you talk?"

"You want to. I'm pretty nearly starved a little."

He was camp chief. Chiefs would get up & decide what to announce. He announced it."
